

The Nautilus Project's Dance between Nature & Computational Design

Helmed in Vigo, Spain, the Nautilus project combines nature-inspired architecture with computational design, linking the private Marine Research Institute (IIM) with the public. It symbolizes the advancement of knowledge through a shell incorporating advanced design methodologies, representing a new era in the fusion of aesthetics and functionality.